Junior High Schools Offer Algebra Study

Fourteen per cent of sixth, seventh, and eighth graders in Torrance schools received algebra training last year, according to a report to the Board of Education.

Some 791 students received algebra instruction in their elementary school classrooms, the report indicated. This was in line with the district's policy of taking children ahead educationally as fast as they can go. Ordinarily, students do not take algebra until their freshman or sophomore year in high school.

Press Surveys Housewives' Views on New Stamp Law

During a telephone survey by The Press, Torrance residents were quizzed as to their reaction to the new law making stamp companies redeem monetary payments for premium books, upon demand of the holder. Answers by residents go as follows:

Mrs. Beverly Bergstrom reacted, saying, "I don't think the purpose of the stamps is to get money. There are things that I can get through the stamps that I ordinarily wouldn't buy. Although I know I'm not getting something for nothing, I feel like I'm getting something for just a little bit of effort."

"I save stamps, but I would prefer the lower prices we would pay if we didn't have them," Mrs. Naomi Haley mentioned.

Mrs. Marguerite Gentry stated, "That's a real good idea, I think I have about five books. They have some nice things, however, I think I would just as soon take the money."

"I still prefer the merchandise," Mrs. Nelson Lee answered, "Saving the stamps gives me something to look forward to. I'm plenty satisfied with the merchandise."

Mrs. L. B. Meyers said, "I would just as soon leave it as is, premiums are kind of nice, although, for people who need the money, the cash refund value can come in handy."

"I think the public should know that they are not being taken for a ride by the stamp companies, and this seems to be a pretty good way to show them," was the answer of Mrs. F. L. Peterson.

Mrs. Henry Dolan replied, "I think it is perfectly alright the way it is. I consider the stamps a bonus in the first place, so I think the companies should be able to do it the way they wish."

Scientists Observe

Scientists, engaged in research for the Air Pollution Control District, observed several years ago that engines burning gasoline containing a high percentage of olefins produced exhaust that caused more eye irritation than did exhaust from engines using low olefin gasoline.

The observations at first were challenged, because the heat and pressure within the engine will "crack" molecules of other classes of hydrocarbons into olefins. Even a gasoline with no olefins will produce exhaust with some olefins; however, cracking within the engine does not account for the largest part of the olefins in exhaust.

Years of careful study have firmly established that the amount of olefins in the exhaust increases directly with the increase of olefins in the fuel.

It has been found that olefins are the most active of the hydrocarbons in producing compounds that irritate the eyes and cause damage to plants. When olefins mix with nitrogen oxides in the atmosphere, under the effect of sunlight, they produce a number of such irritating compounds, among them formaldehyde.

Hydrocarbon Source
Exhaust is only one source of the hydrocarbons emitted by the automobile. Substantial amounts of hydrocarbons also are lost by evaporation from fuel tanks, carburetors and during refueling, while hydrocarbons that blow past the piston rings and escapes through the crankcase vents may comprise as much as one-third of the total. A reduction of olefins in the gasoline strikes directly at such losses, for these olefins enter the atmosphere just as they were when they left the refinery.

Rule 63 thus is based upon these premises: olefins yield the smog compounds that most strongly irritate eyes and damage plants; the amount of olefins in exhaust and from the other automotive sources is related to amount in the gasoline; and it is practical to reduce the olefin content of the gasoline marketed in Los Angeles County.

It is expected that this reduction combined with the exhaust control that will be on cars by 1965, will reduce the level of olefin emissions below the 1940 (pre-smog) level. The level will remain below that of 1940 until 1980, and then slowly rise with the increase in auto population, but will not again touch the levels now existing in 1960 until about the year 2000.
